Experience zero gravity in a luxury flight package

Virtuoso, a luxury travel company, is offering travel into space with Virgin Galactic beginning in 2009, but a few budding astronauts will get to take a small step into the final frontier this summer.

A one-time zero-gravity flight package aboard G-Force One is being offered by Virtuoso Aug. 17-19 in Las Vegas. The aircraft is Zero-G's Boeing 727-200 that simulates weightlessness.

The package includes two nights at the Bellagio Hotel, the Zero-G flight, a Zero-G flight suit, souvenir DVD and photo, welcome reception, zero-gravity safety briefing, Virgin Galactic party, flight certificate and airport transfers. Cost is $4,199 per person, double occupancy.

And, in case you're wondering, the three-day Virgin Galactic experience in 2009 will set space travelers back $200,000 per person.
